ITALO-DUTCH TRADE PACT APPROVED

Rome, Yesterday.
The Austrian Chancellor, Dr. Dollfuss, and the Hungarian Premier, General Komlos, will officially visit the Italian Government from March 14 to March 16, to discuss Signor Mussolini's plan for the economic restoration of the Danubian States.

The Government has approved the Italian-Dutch trade agreement under which Italy will buy some Dutch coal and facilitate the Dutch export of pedigree cattle, seed potatoes, and a certain amount of Colonial produce, while Holland removes the restrictions on the import of a number of Italian industrial products and promises that the Dutch market will give favourable treatment to Italian agricultural products for example, lemons, rice and peaches.—Reuter.

ROOSEVELT ORDERS INQUIRY.

Washington, Yesterday.
President Roosevelt has ordered an investigation into the charges of sabotage against the Army aeroplanes, which have been carrying the American air mail since the suspension, last month, of all private air mail contracts following the disclosure of alleged graft in the allotment of the contracts.

It is alleged that the sabotage involved punctured petrol tanks, tampered controls and water in the petrol.—Reuter.

FANTASTIC RUMOURS

The United States Secretary for War, Mr. George H. Dern, scouts the Army aeroplane sabotage reports as fantastic.—Reuter.

INDEPENDENCE OF PHILIPPINES

ROOSEVELT ADVOCATES
REVIVAL OF BILL

MILITARY BASES MAY GO

WASHINGTON, YESTERDAY.
PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT HAS SENT A SPECIAL MESSAGE TO CONGRESS, RECOMMENDING THE REVIVAL OF THE HAWES-CUTTING PHILIPPINES INDEPENDENCE BILL, WITH AN AMENDMENT RELINQUISHING THE UNITED STATES MILITARY AND NAVAL BASES ON THE ISLANDS AFTER THE GRANTING OF INDEPENDENCE.

The Hawes-Cutting Bill, passed in Congress a year ago, automatically lapsed early this year, by the failure of the Philippine Government to accept it.

It provides for independence within 12 to 14 years, with the United States retaining the option of keeping certain military and naval bases on the islands after independence.

Concerning naval bases President Roosevelt recommended the ultimate settlement of the matter in terms satisfactory to the United States and Philippines Governments.

He said that he did not believe that the other provisions of the original law needed to be changed at present. He was confident that the imperfections and inequalities, where they exist, can be corrected, and after a proper hearing and in fairness to both peoples would be concluded satisfactorily.

RECOMMENDATIONS GIVE SATISFACTION

New York, Yesterday.
Senator Manuel Quezon, head of the Philippine Independence Commission, has expressed complete satisfaction with President Roosevelt's recommendations to Congress concerning the Hawes-Cutting Bill.—Reuter.

Result.

FRANCE GREATEST LOSER

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegrams, etc. Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received March 3, 9.43 a.m.)

London, Yesterday.

President Roosevelt's revaluation of the dollar, on January 31, has so far cost the Central Banks of the three chief gold standard countries a loss of over U.S. $325,000,000 of their gold reserves.

Of this total, France lost $188,000,000, the Netherlands $85,000,000, and Switzerland, $52,000,000.

The gold drain at present has practically ceased, due to the depreciation of the dollar to a point where it is unprofitable to buy from Central Banks to ship to America.—United Press per S. C. Gold Bar Co.

NEW SILVER PLAN FOR AMERICA

House Advocates For Another Bill.

INFLATIONARY SCHEME

Washington, Yesterday.
The House of Representatives members, Messrs. Murdock, Felsinger and Dies, have drafted a silver Bill to be introduced into the House on Monday. It provides for a Treasury purchase of 1,500,000,000 ounces of silver, against which money would be issued.

Although the metal would be purchased in the open market, at the prevailing price, the Bill proposes a 15 per cent. premium for silver shipped to the United States in payment of farm products.

Mr. Murdock said that Senator Wheeler favoured the plan.—Reuter.

LONDON SILVER MARKET.

Prices Remain Unchanged.

London, Yesterday.
Spot and forward silver prices remained unchanged on the London market to-day. Closing prices were as follows:—

	Mar. 2	Mar. 3
Spot	20½	20½
Forward	20.9/16	20.9/16

The London on New York cross rate to-day closed at £-U.S.$ 5.07½ as compared with £-U.S.$ 5.07½ at yesterday's closing.—Our Own Correspondent.

SILVER AGREEMENT OPPOSED.

Divided Opinion In Legislative Yuan.

Nanking, Yesterday.
Latest developments indicate that the road is not smooth for the ratification by China, of the London Silver Agreement.

It is understood that many members of the Legislative Yuan are vigorously opposing ratification, which proposal is at present under consideration by the Yuan.—Reuter.

AMERICAN FINANCE FIGURES.

Stabilisation Fund
Still Untouched.

$300,000,000 GOLD PURCHASES

Washington, Yesterday.
The American exchange stabilisation fund has not yet been used according to a Treasury official, who has disclosed that the Government has purchased over U.S. $300,000,000 worth of foreign gold without resorting to the fund.

The increment resulting from the reduction in the weight of gold in the dollar is also untouched.

A Treasury statement shows that the receipts for the fiscal year, on February 28, was U.S. $1,886,000,000 and expenditure, U.S. $4,238,000,000, while the gold assets amounted to U.S. $7,400,000,000.—Reuter.

WEATHER FORECAST

Moderate north-east winds, cloudy, with some drizzle, was the forecast in the weather report issued by the Royal Observatory yesterday evening.

Severe street battles between police and rioters, the worst since the Revolution, occurred in Paris, on the night of February 6. For over six hours demonstrators fought to reach the Chamber of Deputies, and when within 25 yards of the gates, were fired upon by the Republican Guards. M. Daladier's Cabinet resigned "to avoid further bloodshed". The police attempt to control the huge crowds of demonstrators in the Place de l'Hotel de Ville.—(S. & G.)

DISARMAMENT SETBACK

French Criticism Of British Plan.

NO TRIAL PERIOD

Paris, Yesterday.

France criticises the British Disarmament plan owing to the absence of a trial period in the plan which would lead to the Disarmament of France and the re-armament of Germany.

In the first year, Germany would be superior to France in artillery and tanks. Moreover, there would be no guarantee provided by the sanctions, since the consultation provided would prove insufficient.

The above is the gist of the reply to a questionnaire, made by the French Foreign Minister, M. Barthou, in the Chamber of Deputies, before the Foreign Affairs Committee.—Reuter.

AMERICA IN ACCORD WITH BRITAIN.

Sympathy Shown to Suggestions.

Washington, Yesterday.
The United States Government are in complete accord with the British view on Disarmament, according to records of the conversation between Mr. Phillips, Under-Secretary of state, and the British Ambassador.

Mr. Phillips informed Sir Ronald Lindsay that the United States sympathise with the British suggestions and hopes that the successful resumption of general Disarmament discussions may be affected thereby.

SUBSTITUTE FOR LOCH NESS
MONSTER A COWLED MONK

London, Yesterday.

Since the Loch Ness monster disappeared from its Winter quarters, popular public interest centres on the re-appearance of Westminster Abbey's only ghost, after two years' absence.

The phantom is a tall, lean cowled monk who was murdered by robbers in the reign of Henry the Eighth.

Officials of the Abbey state that the apparition patrols the cloisters between 5 o'clock in the afternoon and midnight, and has an uncomfortable trick of vanishing without warning.

He habitually walks two inches above the floor due to the sinking of the pavement since his life time.

Two American tourists claim to have interviewed him and to have obtained details of his demise from his own lips.—Reuter.

Short Stories of Local Interest.

THE VOLUNTEER

By James Dalziel.

"I see not any road of perfect peace which a man can walk, but to take counsel of his own bosom." Emerson, 'Heroism'.

IF the Great War took Hong-Kong by surprise it certainly was not the fault of the Governor. For a good twelve months before the Declaration hit the Colony like a punch below the belt "Paddy" had been all about, going the round of Clubs and meetings, warning, beseeching, blarneying as he best knew how, preaching his gospel of service — "War is coming, join the Volunteers!" But if his eloquent endeavour resulted in any recruits nobody heard of them. Had we not know and discounted the cry of "Wolf, wolf!" any day those last five years. It was only a stunt of the old man's. His was a voice crying in a wilderness of self-sufficiency.

Then overnight Statue Square sprouted a young forest of George Rex's War notice boards, and the Day was upon us. It was George Rex's War, and He let you know it. Just what you could and could not do, now that a State of War was declared. Your duty as a good subject, and the pains and penalties if you reneged. Nasty penalties! With sudden death always in the background. For the Empire it might be the King's War, but here it was Paddy May's War, and he never let you forget it either: Governor and Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty's Forces ashore and afloat, perhaps too much the autocrat to make a first-class governor in normal times, in wartime he came into his own. Tireless beyond belief, efficient beyond criticism, with all the strings of the Far-Eastern under-ground in his capable hands, men knew there was a man at the top and thanked God for it.

The very day of the Declaration the War Office withdrew the regulars of the garrison, leaving but a dozen Royal Engineers and about enough gunners to handle one gun in each fort, saying in effect to the community—all trained men are wanted on the French Front, get busy and defend yourselves! There remained then as a garrison half a battalion of Indian troops, and the Volunteer corps of some three hundred men. And the German fleet was 'somewhere in the Pacific,' while the loom of the Islands to the North, who had not yet declared themselves one way or another, with their millions of tough trained men, lay on the community like a death-cloud.

Overnight, as it seemed, the Colony bourgeoned into kah-kee. It was not that we were an obstreperously warlike or even loyal community, but just that the position was such that every man with any red corpuscles left felt that he would feel safer with a gun to his hand. The young ones caught the war fever and went to the front, the more sober-sided said—"What the hell's the use? Don't they tell us it'll be all over by Christmas." Which introduces John George Mauley.

To his friends he was always George, perhaps as being more truly English, for George could have posed as a typical English business man of the Far East. Eagerly with no dissenters. He had joined the old established firm of Reid, Herring and Co., Ship-owners and Merchants, some twenty years before, and now occupied the position of Number Two Talpan, with complete satisfaction to himself, and a modicum of the same to the London directors. He was turned forty and thirteen stone, played a sound game of golf, had given up tennis, swam two night a week in the summer, and managed to exist on ten Del Mundos and half a bottle of Scotch per diem, with a 'spot of gin, dear boy,' before tiffin and dinner. He had enough brains to keep his job down, and none left over to worry with about matters outside his routine. He owned a good digestion, no temperament, and less imagination. He took things as he found them, and he found them good. A man's sort and genial; you can spot a dozen lads just like him any evening in any club here.

His reactions to the War were mostly negative. "No need to panic!" But when he arrived at the office that morning he got what he designated as a 'nasty knock.'

Brantlees, his chief, the Talpan, had volunteered for the front, and was leaving next day. George had forgotten that Brantlees in his early days had been a Sapper Officer. Young Johnes, and Fitz-Stafford, and Armour, and Dundalk had also volunteered, and Brantlees was taking them with him. Indeed the majority of the lads had asked to go, but he was only taking the four who had had some military training. So it seemed that war fever had been raging in the office, and George had known nothing about it. Then the important thing as he saw it welled up in him. Blast the War!

"Who's going to do the work?" he grunted.

"You, of course. Who the hell else?" It occurred to Mauley that the Boss had lost no time in resuming the best military manner. "You'll stay here, and you'll be in charge! You'll buck up and do your damndest! You can run the show quite all right if you get a move on—you know you can."

"What, with half a staff? You might have left me a shipping clerk anyhow."

"With no staff, if necessary. You seem to forget there's a war on."

"My aunt, I'm not likely to forget it. A bally fine war it's going to be for me. I can see that much sticking out a mile."

"Well, it's all arranged with London. I've no time to argue. Come over here and I'll tell you anything you don't know! Just one other thing. Get away up to Volunteer Headquarters and join up! Every able-bodied man that stays behind will be wanted here."

"What, me a soldier! Me join up! I'm damned if I do. With your job to do, and mine, and everybody else's as looks likely, when am I going to find time to play at soldiers. I say I'm damned if I do."

"You'll be damned if you don't—but that's your business. Let's get on with it! Here's the charter for the 'Lingam.' Let old Sing-Fat have her for a year at the same figure! Here's this shipment of piece-goods on the P. and O." And so it went on till tiffin time; Brantlees drooling on, and Mauley doing his best to concentrate and get the hang of the Firm's many activities.

He arrived at the Club for tiffin to get one of the many shocks that the coming years were to bring him. The down stairs cloak-rooms were jammed with rifles and bayonets and kah-kee topees, and straps holding cartridges—which he was to know later on, and to his sorrow in the wet months, as 'web equipment'; and the chairs in the lounge were decorated with the overflow of weapons and martial harness. And quite a half of the men in the bar were in uniform, a bit self-conscious, perhaps, but not at all ashamed. "Good Lord!" he said to himself. "What's the matter with them all? What's the world coming to anyway? Dammit, the war's eight thousand miles away!"

There was old Rastling, seventy if he was a day, tottery on his pins, and with a bad heart that he was always grouching about—what kind of a thing was he to go n-soldiering? There was Johnes, not so old, but two hundred and fifty pounds if he weighed an ounce, what a fine mark for the enemy. Boardman of the Bank, twenty thousand golden shekels per annum, and now dolled up in the kah-kee of an infantry private. Hell's bells! Was he awake, or had they all gone barmy?

In the dining room things were to him even more unaccountable. The same six of them always tiffin-ed at the same table, and of the six that day he was the only one not in kah-kee. And the talk was not as it was wont and as it should have been of sensible things like exchange and the markets but of bloody war, and chiefly of the Japs and of what side these wily lads would come in on. It would be all U. P. with Hong Kong if they came in on the wrong side—that needed no demonstration. He could see that. He had forgotten the Japs—damn the Japs anyhow!

No one mooted the subject of the day—volunteering; that was a matter for each man his own judgment, but he sensed an atmosphere of disapproval. After the fancied developments in the Great War in

NEW GILLETTE BLADE

MADE IN ENGLAND
BRIT. R.D. NO. 750681

GILLETTE SLOTTED BLADES

now very much cheaper

New and improved manufacturing processes have enabled Gillette to reduce the price of their Slotted Blades "without altering the quality." The blades are exactly the same—the same quality of steel, the same hard, super-keen edges. The only change is in the price, because Gillette have decided to pass on to the public all the benefit of the reduced production costs. This means that the highest possible standard of shaving luxury is now available to every man, whatever his income.

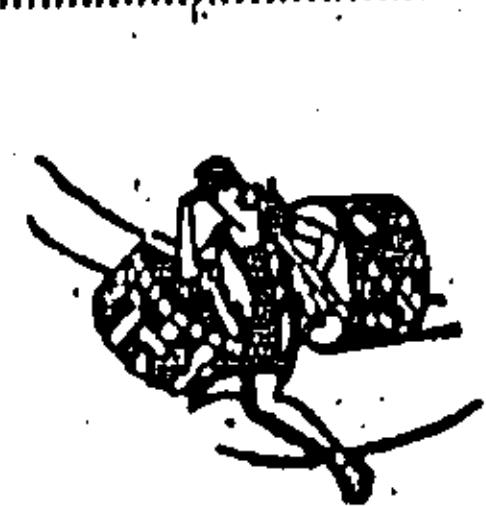

The new English-made Gillette Slotted Blades mark the latest and greatest advance in the manufacture of safety razor blades. The slot makes possible what is known as the dual-tempering process. Whilst the steel in the centre of the blade is sufficiently pliable to fit snugly to the curve of the razor, the cutting edges are more finely tempered than ever. Result—stronger, keener, longer-lasting edges and smoother, cleaner shaving. Ask for Gillette Slotted Blades.

The upturned side hugs the crown and follows the line of the head closely.

Victorian Fashion Modified

Bolero Adopted To The Longer Line.

"OVER-BLOUSES" IN SUEDE AND VELVETEEN

MODISTES are making use of the bolero again, though it is not so much a favourite as it was in 1900, partly because the modern jackets have overcome difficulties of cut, and also because we prefer a longer line. The bolero is now best in fur, such as lapin or summer ermine, with cape-sleeves.

A Victorian revival is the bolero of jet or sequins; but the straight little long-sleeved coat, with cap to match, is smarter and more becoming. The short sac-shape in fur or velvet is another favourite for the younger people, who are taking to Switzerland some delightful semi-sporting jackets of chamol, corduroy, and coloured velveteens.

Suede in all colours, with zip-fastenings, is cut in cardigan or military-jacket style. Some of these garments in suede or velveteen are called over-blouses, and are cut below the waist, doing up with either large wood buttons, torpedo fastenings in chromium, or decorative metal hooks-and-eyes. Others are made of the new knitted wool-designs in dark shades, with small metal buttons.

Velvet Shoes Lose Popularity

Evening Sandals In New Designs.

VELVET shoes have not kept their popularity, for the very good reason that they tend to make the foot look about two sizes larger than shoes of crepe-de-chine or gold or silver kid.

There are some excellent new designs in evening sandals, always better to dance in than the court shoe, which slips so easily at the heel.

Some of them are tooless, but most toes look better covered. Their strappings are slender, and any buckle or button fastening there may be is small in size and delicate in design.

Pearls And Chenille

ROPES of small pearls twisted with chenille, coral mounted on a twist of silky panne and falling in a deep fringe, and many other delicately coloured transparent beads make some of the less expensive but none the less charming evening jewel adornments for the dance frocks designed for winter festivities.

Tea-Gowns Are Changing

Taking New Place In
To-day's Dress.

GROWING MORE LIKE
EVENING FROCKS

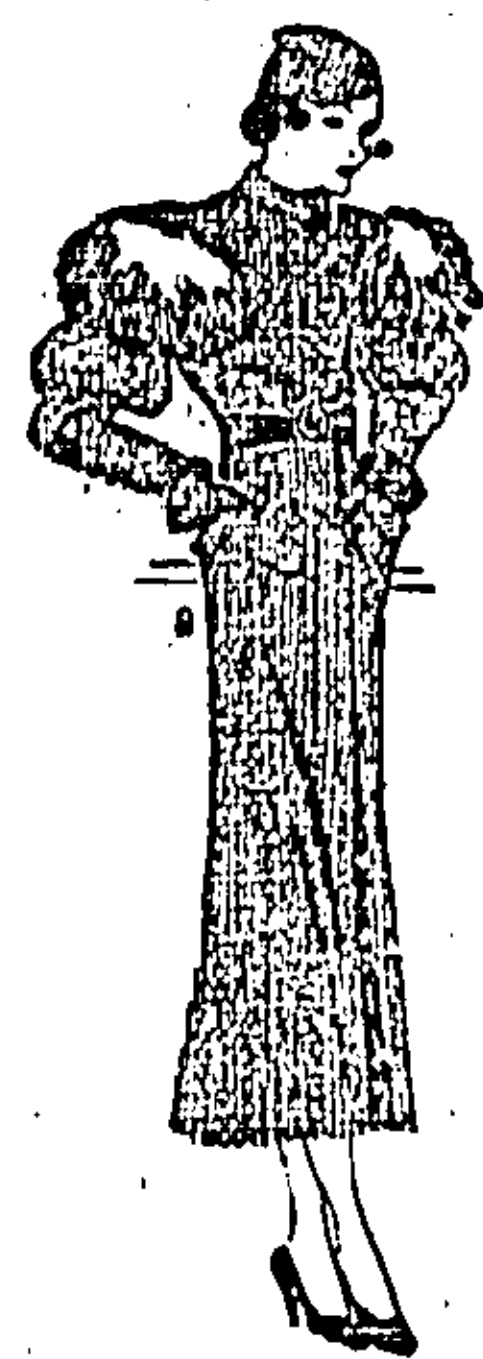

THAT favourite garment known originally as the tea-gown is attracting many women. For some years past the ultra-feminine tea-gown had been supplanted by the pyjama variety of costume, which possibly made more appeal to the younger women.

The tea-gowns many can remember were essentially fashions belonging to their mothers, and possibly the last of the super-elegant fashions that they can recollect, as, after the War, short and scanty skirts came in. The tea-gown in its new phases makes rapid progress. True, the pyjama suits still remain, but they have now a tea-gowny look added, as the coat is generally long, slim, and graceful.

Many of the newest tea-gowns of sleeky trend, but gorgeous fabric, are cut on semi-tailored lines which provide a modern smartness which is good in cases where a woman looks well in distinctive clear-cut somewhat severe lines.

This often applies nowadays to the boudoir wrap and dressing-gown. It may be of velvet, corduroy, angora or satin, lined with a contrasting silk or wool material. Velvet and crushed, stamped velvet or ermine-cloth is a great favourite.

Such fabrics look younger and more chic when fashioned on tailored lines and shorn of frills and trimmings. They are easier to pack and more generally practical for the travelling public. This simplicity need not deter the wearer from indulging in colour-contrast.

Protecting The Hair In Wind

Parisian Methods Of Dealing With It.

IN Paris it is being realised that the wind should be tempered not only to the shorn but also to the unshorn lamb.

Paris hair is by no means so long as that which grows in England, and when it is long it is mostly gathered up at the back into some sort of order.

This may, here and there, be a Greek knot or a knot low on the neck.

But more often it is a mere assemblage of curls which grips the loose strands of hair and keeps them in order even in a wind.

Where hair is a little long, veils and nets are also used to prevent it from blowing about in confusion.

Fragrant Baths For Winter

Welcome Luxury Of The Cold Season.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

HERE are some suggestions from the beauty parlours for the winter hot bath, which, taken either before dinner or at bed time, is one of the welcome luxuries of the cold season.

Aluminium tubes of salts, each one sufficient for a large bath, and each having the natural aromatic scent of a plant, have been invented after years of research for one herbal salon in Mayfair.

The needles of silver pine trees, mountain fir, and pine provide the oils of one version combined with aromatic salts, which are intended for sufferers from rheumatism.

The flowers of West Indian limes, with a soap prepared from limes also, are crushed to provide another bath salt for insomnia treatment. Taken just before going to bed, they quieten the nerves and make the skin soft.

Reducing bath salts are one of the most popular productions of a specialist, who also has a non-reducing type of bath salt for those of her clients who do not want to reduce, but find a water softener pleasant and beneficial to the health.

Borderers And Navy Record Soccer Wins

Vital Match At Caroline Hill To-day

KOWLOON NEARLY SURPRISED

THE Borderers and the Navy are still in the running for the premier soccer league championship. Yesterday they secured wins over the Recreio and Artillery, respectively, to creep nearer to the leadership.

What may prove the determining match in the competition will be staged to-day at Caroline Hill when the champions, South China, meet St. Joseph's. In the other game to-day the East Lancs meet the Lincolns at the same time at Sookunpoo.

Kowloon, after leading by four clear goals at the interval, were very nearly surprised by the Athletic yesterday, and only just secured the points by the odd goal in nine.

First Division

KOWLOON BEAT ATHLETIC.

Lead 4-0 But Win By 5 To 4.

TWO PENALTIES CONCEDED.

On the Club ground yesterday an evenly contested game between Kowloon and the Athletic resulted in Kowloon just winning by the odd goal in nine, after holding a four goals lead at the interval.

Kowloon had the majority of the play in the first half, but in the second period the tables were reversed, and the Athletic went very close to forcing a draw.

The game opened with Kowloon forcing a corner, and the ball hovered around the Athletic goal area for some considerable time, but Kowloon could not penetrate. Play was very keen, although the condition of the turf made tackling dangerous. The players had much difficulty in keeping their feet, and at the start passing was wild. The game, however, was still in its early stages when G. White sent in a weak effort. Li should have saved the shot easily, but the ball entered the net to give Kowloon the lead.

The Athletic's second reverse could well be attributed to the bad state of the ground, for Lo stumbled and conceded a penalty for handling. Elliott took the spot kick, and placed Kowloon two goals ahead. Very shortly afterwards, Kowloon were awarded another penalty for the same offence. Elliott again converted from the spot to increase the lead. Immediately the ball was kicked off, G. White obtained and ran through to add a fourth goal just before the interval. The Athletic, however, had a very poor share of the luck during this half, and hardly deserved to be four goals down.

The second half opened very differently, and the Athletic were early aggressive. Au Ping Ming decreased the arrears when he beat Cord with a well-placed shot. A few minutes later, following a pretty short passing movement, the same player again found the net with a hard drive, giving Cord no chance.

Kowloon then took up the attack again, and following a left flank movement, forced a corner. Blake took the flag kick, and sent the ball well over to Eastman, who, standing unmarked netted easily.

From the restart, the Athletic swept down the field in great style, the inside forwards indulging in a smart piece of short passing for Au Ping Ming to put the finishing touches with a nice shot which had Cord beaten all the way.

The Athletic continued the attack, and five minutes before the end, Au Kim Fung reduced the lead with a well directed shot.

Kowloon—Cord; Everest and Williams; Davies, Bils and Tillery; Eastman, V. White, Elliott, G. White and Blake.

Athletic—Li Wing-sang; Lo Hong-choong and Tang Kwong-wing; Ip Pang-fai, Ho Chor-yn and Yeung Chi-cheung; Fung King-yui, Au Ping-ming, Au Kim-fung and Tang Kwong-sum.

CHAMPIONS BEATEN

C.B.A. LADIES WIN CAER CLARK CUP ENCOUNTER

Goal By Miss Whitley Decides Issue.

SAINTS NOW HAVE A CHANCE

THE Central British Association Ladies provided the biggest sensation in the Caer Clark Cup Competition this season when they defeated the Hong Kong Ladies', formerly unbeaten champions, by an only goal scored in the second half.

The Hong Kong Ladies' were undoubtedly the better team, pressing for the better part of the game, but poor marksmanship against a sound defence, deprived them of many goal-scoring opportunities.

The C.B.A. stood up to the fast pace very well, and in one of their many determined attacks, Miss M. Whitley made full use of an opportunity to score the deciding goal. Miss Hunt missed another chance soon after.

Miss M. Bryson and Miss E. Beavis, in the intermediate line, were the outstanding players in the winning team, while the two full-backs, Miss P. Woolley and Miss F. Walker, broke up many combined movements of the Hong Kong forwards. Mrs. Webber, in goal, also proved very safe.

Wing Players Weak

Miss B. Pope and Miss B. Helbling were the pick of the champions' team, but their forwards failed to settle down to their usual fast combination, and both wing players were weak.

This defeat, their first this season, places the Hong Kong Ladies only one point ahead of St. Andrews with two games to play. Much now depends on the meeting of the Hong Kong Ladies' and the Recreio "A" eleven on March 17.

The Hong Kong Ladies' defeated the C.B.A. by 4 goals to 1 in the first round.

The following were the teams.

H.K. Ladies—M. Bird, E. M. Gray, B. Helbling, M. Wallace, B. Pope, Mrs. M. K. Lowe, E. Bell, J. Dalziel, E. Gunnar, J. Churchill and Mrs. S. Adams.

C.B.A. Ladies—Mrs. Webber, P. Woolley, F. Walker, M. Bryson, E. Beavis, G. MacNider, D. Hunt, M. Whitley, E. Woolley, M. Smith and P. Best.

The Caer Clark fixture between the "Y" Ladies and the Recreio "B" Ladies was postponed, as the latter were unable to raise a team. The game will probably be played next Thursday.

The "Y" Ladies, however, met the Torpedomen of H.M.S. Cumberland in a friendly game at King's Park.

After securing a lead of four clear goals in the first half through Edwards (2), Cripps and Flowers, the naval team broke up and a mixed was played. Watson then scored twice for the Ladies and Flowers netted the fifth goal for the Cumberland.

The following were the teams.

PAYS WIN DIVIDEND OF $284.70

MR. FROST RIDES SUBS CLASSIC WINNER

SADKO'S SENSATIONAL ECLIPSE

MAGNIFICENT RIDING BY MR. NORMAN DEITZ WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR A BIG UPSET IN THE AUSTRALIAN PONIES' CHAMPIONS YESTERDAY AT THE VALLEY WHEN MESSRS. GRIST AND BECK'S BRONZE ERA BEAT ABLE AMAZON TO PAY $284.70 AS THE RESULT OF A RUNAWAY WIN. WOODLAND STAG, HANDICAPPED BY A POOR START, WAS UNPLACED.

Mr. Leo Frost achieved a very creditable triumph when he secured a win in the subs classic on Tiny Star. Classic Hall, the favourite, taking second place by a neck. The champion jockey rode another winner on Alacrity. Mr. T. L. Wong and Mr. Y. S. Chang, the Shanghai riders, also secured two wins apiece, the former also riding two seconds and a third.

Gold Currency (Mr. S. W. Pan) upset the "double" and a dividend of $114 was paid out on the pari-mutuel and a "double" dividend of $282.

Skiddaw (Mr. Black) and Brass Idol (Mr. Sewell), set the pace in the Nil Desperandum Stakes, but both ponies were out of the race by the time the stands were reached.

Racing Spirit (Mr. Pih) having secured the lead, which he maintained until the Rock was reached, when Copper Idol was brought through with a terrific burst by Mr. Y. S. Chang.

In the home straight, Sarabande (Mr. Heard) offered a spirited challenge to the favourite, and had the race been over a longer distance, he must have won. As it was, Copper Idol secured the verdict, to pay only $8.50 on the pari-mutuel.

Racing Spirit filled the third position just ahead of Dare Devil (Mr. S. W. Pan).

An indication of the much larger crowd present than on any of the four previous days was provided by the fact that the cash sweep first prize was $1,232.

"Double" Upset

The favourite finished nowhere in the "B" Division of the Griffins' Spring Handicap, William Osler (Mr. Heard), making his effort much too soon after a false start.

Given a gruelling race, commencing in the back straight, the pony led into the home straight, but was rapidly overhauled by Gold Currency (Mr. S. W. Pan) who showed a good burst of speed over the last furlong to win comfortably, and pay $114 on the pari-mutuel, besides upsetting the double.

Mr. Wong sent Great Hall into second place ahead of Ebony Idol (Mr. Chang) and Tummel (Mr. Deitz) who dead-heated for third place. West Parade (Mr. Paul Botelho) filled the fifth position.

Though it was only a $5 cash sweep the first prize was worth $2,492, which established a new record for the past eight months.

Runaway Win In Classic

Contrary to all expectations, Able Amazon (Mr. Chang) failed to win the Australian Champions, Bronze Era (Mr. Deitz), who had proved most disappointing in former outings recording a runaway victory to pay $284.70.

Bronze Era was away from the gate like a flash, and on passing the stands for the first time had secured an appreciable lead over Lady Peel's Lucy Glitters, who was also well ahead of the remainder of the field.

Bronze Era maintained his pace and the rest of the field who were expecting him to crack up at any moment found themselves well in arrears when entering the home straight.

Able Amazon sprinted well at the finish but was unable to catch Messrs. Grist and Beck's candidate, and Mr. Chang was very fortunate to secure second place, ahead of Bag Tor (Mr. Wong), when he pulled in Able Amazon on nerving the post.

Racing Heart (Mr. Pih), was fourth, and Woodland Stag (Mr. Frost), second favourite, came fifth. Woodland Stag was unfortunate to get away to a very poor start and was always too far behind to offer any serious challenge to the leaders.

Though the pace appeared to indicate record time the time of 2:42.2 was in reality no less than 24 seconds lower than Night Star's track record.

Gate Broken At Start

Mortmain (Mr. Proulx), broke the gate at the commencement of the additional race and from the one of the best finishes produced at the Meeting was witnessed in the subs. champions when Tiny Star (Mr. Frost), Classic Hall (Mr. Wong), Surprise (Mr. Marshall), and Cavalcade (Mr. Deitz) fought out a desperate finish to the 134 miles. There was only a neck separating the placed ponies, Mr. Frost securing the verdict by vir-due of his narrow lead at the back of the home straight.

Classic Hall would probably have won had he not been blocked by the three ponies just ahead of him. He swerved towards the rails and lost valuable ground at a critical stage.

Tiny Star fully justified the confidence placed in him by Mr. D. S. Li, the Shanghai jockey who returned North on Friday and who said the pony was the best of the 1934 subs.

Classic Hall got away to a poor start and was unable to make an early effort on account of the fast pace set by Chesterfield (Mr. Pih), who attempted most unsuccessfully to secure a runaway win.

Several names, including those of Messrs. H. E. Crayford, Mr. C. Wood, Mr. L. A. Anning, a former member of the Plymouth Cycling Club, and Mr. A. J. Raptis, manager of the British Cycle Company have been received.

It is understood the first meeting of the Club will be held on April 1 at the British Cycle Company, Hennessy Road, Wanchai, at 2 p.m.

Record Holder

Mr. Kents, who is the promoter of the proposed Club, has been a member of the committee of five of the best known cycling clubs in Great Britain and Ireland and an amateur racer.

In addition to being a member of the Ireland Northern County Club, Belfast, he has won 16 open races out of the 19 in which he competed, and is the present holder of four long distance records in Ireland, in addition to setting unbeaten figures for the Midland and Southern Counties 50 miles races.

All China Marks

Mr. Kents is also the holder of every record from 5 to 100 miles in China, which he broke in April last at Shanghai, covering 100 miles in 4 hours, 35 minutes and 50 seconds. The last part of the attempt, he states, was covered in bad weather, otherwise he might have broken the world's record for that distance.

It is Mr. Kents' ambition to set up a local record for 12 hours, 24 hours and 1,000 miles after the Club has been started.

resultant poor start Beta (Mr. Sun), and Copperfield (Mr. Chang), got away to a good start over the mile distance but both were displaced by Zero (Mr. Harriman) in the back straight.

Fair View (Mr. Wong), however, came through strongly at the Rock, when it was clearly seen that Zero, third favourite, would be unplaced.

Mr. Marshall rode a very fine finishing quarter on Glorious Sun to come within a length and a half of the favourite, though he barely managed to hold off Limelight (Mr. Deitz).

Sadko's Sensational Eclipse

The sensational eclipse of Sadko (Mr. Soares) who was unplaced in the Happy Valley Spring Handicap, "A" Division, provided one of the features of the afternoon.

A red-hot favourite, Sadko got away to a very poor start and never recovered from the gruelling pace he was put through in the early stages of the race.

Navy Hall (Mr. Deitz) very nearly secured a win, only a length separating him from King's Justice (Mr. Chang), who paid a surprising low win dividend in view of Sadko's failure.

Mayflower (Mr. Sun) beat Sadko for fourth place.

Royal Flush Fourth

Mr. Wong recorded his second win of the afternoon, when he brought in Jungle Jim to pay $25.70 from a field of 15 starters in the Happy Valley Spring Handicap, "B" Division. Mr. Marshall, the Shanghai champion, did well to secure second place on King's Parade from Mike (Mr. Pih). Royal Flush (Mr. Heard) was fourth.

PEREIRA TAKES 7 FOR 12 BOWLERS DO WELL ON SOFT WICKETS

CIVIL SERVICE DISMISSED FOR 18 RUNS

I.R.C. JUNIORS WIN TITLE

F. D. PEREIRA, THE COLONY FAST BOWLER, PROVIDED ANOTHER CRICKET SENSATION YESTERDAY WHEN HE SECURED 7 WICKETS FOR 12 RUNS AGAINST THE CIVIL SERVICE AT SOOKUNPOO. IN HIS FIRST LEAGUE MATCH THIS SEASON HE TOOK 6 FOR 9 AGAINST CRAIGENGOWER.

The Indians secured their fourth win, and the championship now rests on the Club's remaining game against the University and the Indians' last match against the Army — if the Club win they win the championship. In the other premier league game the Army beat the University, C. S. M. Elwin securing 7 for 44.

The I.R.C. won the junior championship for the third time in four seasons when they beat the Civil Service second eleven by 9 wickets after dismissing the Valley Club for the record low total of 18 — the previous lowest was Craigengower's 28 against the I.R.C. in the premier league. Completing their fixture card with 28 points out of a possible 33 the Indians have succeeded Craigengower as junior champions. The Club juniors, at one time, serious contenders, accounted for the Navy in the other league game.

CLUB BEAT NAVY AT H.K.C.C.

Stubborn Innings By Hinder Unavailing.

ARMSTRONG AND HUGH SHINE

The Club second eleven experienced little difficulty in defeating a depleted Navy second eleven in the junior cricket league game at the H.K.C.C. yesterday, winning by 39 runs.

This was the Club's fourth win in seven games and the Navy's third defeat. They tried nine bowlers yesterday.

ACID STOMACH

● If rich foods disagree, it need not mean a "weak stomach." Sourness and gas doesn't mean "indigestion." Just take an anti-acid to sweeten the system, and enjoy life! Before meals, or afterward when distress is felt. Do this awhile, and stomach and bowels will be in fine order. Use only genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia; it is standard. The other preparations do not have the same anti-acid action.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Search For World's Largest Diamonds

Fortunes Made By Single Chance DiscoveryPoor Adventurer Finds Fourth Largest Stone

FORTUNE has thrown the world's fourth largest diamond at the feet of a former Boer farmer turned digger through adversity. In a day, by his find at Elandsfontein, this poor adventurer became a man surpassing rich.

With a nest-egg of some £70,000 he faces the future, for the first time in his life, without a qualm.

Jacobus, Jonker has realised the dream that sustains every diamond digger. The chance of fabulous wealth, the "lucky strike" that will bring ease and luxury to life—such is the vision which keeps thousands of men living rough in the world's barrenest corners, toiling like slaves and, at most times, starving.

That is what three generations have done in the search for South Africa's hidden treasures. The big rewards, alas! for the individual prospector are pathetically few and far between.

From time to time we hear of important finds, a £5,000 diamond here, a £2,000 one there. Less rarely £500 diamonds are turned up. They are not heard of outside the diggings, but they help to maintain the spirits of the seekers, and to keep their spare frames bent over the washings that may bring them fortune.

The earth gives up her treasures hardly and with a strange, romantic freakishness that would seem to defy the commercialisation of the great diamond-mining firms. The latest discovery, made twenty miles north of Pretoria, comes typically at a moment when some of the biggest diamond mines in the world have been virtually closed down.

South Africa owes the disclosure of her unparalleled riches to the chance observation of a trader named O'Reilly in 1867. Unspanning his team of oxen beside the Orange River, he found the children of a Boer settler named Van Niekerk playing marbles with "pebbles" gathered from the river.

O'Reilly brought one of the stones with him when he came back to the coast. That pebble was recognised at length for the gem that it was, and was purchased by the Governor of the Cape for £500.

The excellent O'Reilly shared his modest fortune with the farmer. Van Niekerk himself diagnosed the possibilities of the situation with real Boer acumen. He combed the country for more pebbles of the same sort. After two years he found a Griqua native wearing on his neck, for luck, a stone sewed up in leather.

Dry Diggings At Kimberley.

The farmer paid something like £400 in kind for the privilege of transferring the talisman to his own pocket. It proved a veritable lucky stone for Van Niekerk. Civilisation valued it at £11,200.

At a later date, this time in the guise of a famous "Star of South Africa," and at a much higher valuation, the diamond went to join the famous collection of the Earl of Dudley.

From the time of Van Niekerk's discovery excitement among prospectors in South Africa rose to fever-heat. Diamond seekers from all over the world worked in their thousands upon the banks of the Orange River and the Vaal, seeking the sparkling pebbles that should make their fortunes. The Vaal was found at that time to be much the richer of the two, having washed the volcanic soil of the diamond-bearing grounds of the Transvaal for untold centuries.

As the pursuit became closer and more competitive, still richer prizes were sought. The alluvial deposits lost favour as the possibilities of the "dry diggings" in the now famous mines about Kimberley came to be realised. Soon De Beers, Wessellton, Du Toitspan, and Bullfontein became names known throughout the entire world.

In the closing years of the nineteenth century came the discovery of more volcanic "pipes," as the diamond-bearing veins are termed, in the neighbourhood of Pretoria. Shortly after there followed the foundation of the world's biggest diamond mine, the Premier, which produced in 1905 the world's largest gem, the Cullinan Diamond, which now sparkles in the British Regalia.

The Miner's Rare Reward.

Since then attention has once more been directed to alluvial diggings, with the discovery in 1928 of the immensely rich deposits of Namaqualand. The output of diamonds from alluvial workings had been artificially restricted. The threat of new and almost limitless areas of supply caused so much perturbation that the Government stepped in and themselves assumed control of diamond production.

Restriction of output in no wise damps the hopes of the confirmed diamond digger. He follows every fresh discovery, real or fancied, with unbroken spirit. One recent "rush" produced what must surely have been his greatest race in history—27,000 runners going helter-skelter across the veldt to stake their claims to fortune.

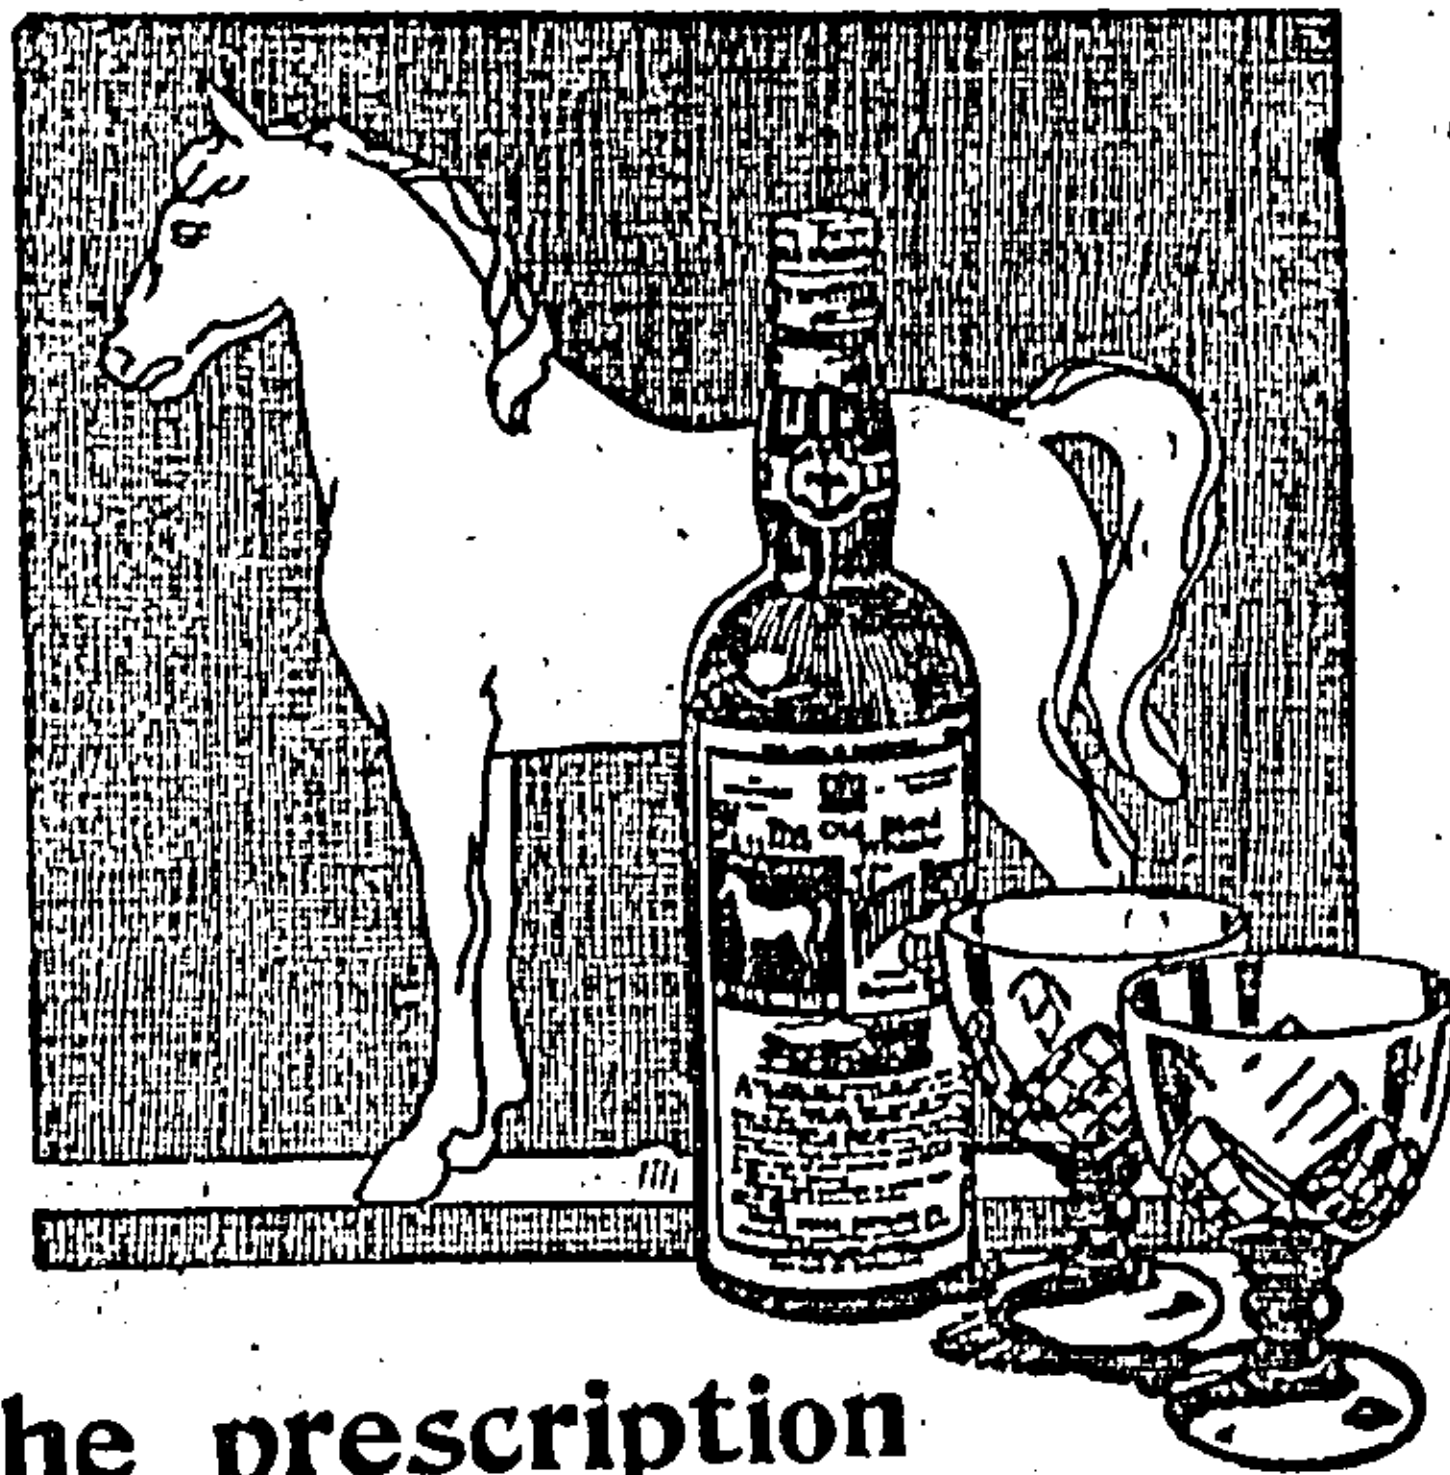

Recent discoveries have brought the diamond-seekers forward in still larger numbers, in spite of the falling trade. A bearded, hard-bitten race, many of them have followed the life for years and have brought up families in hopeless surroundings on next to nothing. Jonker seems to be a typical specimen of the breed. He has kept his head barely above water for eighteen years.

WISE & OTHERWISE

OH, OH, MR. RIPLEY

A theatre manager says that the most successful play is one that fills the audience with tears. This is the kind that also fills the tiers with audience.

Enjoying Himself

Pretty Nurse (to doctor): "What shall I do? Every time I take that patient's pulse it goes faster."
Doctor: "Blindfold him."

Unavoidable

Maizie: "Why did Lottie leave her last post?"
Daisie: "Because the Chief behaved in a way which she resented."

Maizie: "Indeed, and what did he do?"
Daisie: "Grave her the sack."

After The Wedding

Hubby: "Now, darling, who's going to be managing director in this new partnership of ours?"
Wife: "Not me, darling. I shall be quite content to act as treasurer."

Sale-time Silhouette

"I'd like to try that dress on in the window."
"Sorry, madam, you'll have to use the fitting-room."

INTERFERENCE!

A harassed-looking man entered a gramophone shop and inquired for some modern light music, preferably dance records.

"Very well, sir," said the assistant. "I understand perfectly. By the way, didn't you buy some records of operatic music here last week?"

"That's right," said the customer, miserably; "but my wife doesn't care for them—she wants something really snappy."

The assistant took down a number from the shelves.

"Have you had 'Seven Years With the Wrong Woman'?" he asked, naming a popular piece of music.

"No, twelve!" snapped the customer. "But what's that got to do with you?"

READY TO GO

BURGLAR (breaking into house and finding Smith in bed): Lumme I thought you'd gone on a vacation with the missus and kids.

SMITH: Give me five minutes to pack and I'll go.

Sporting Offer

The stranger stopped outside the jewellery shop and gazed intently at a fine display of silver cups in the window. A few minutes later he was talking to the jeweller.

"What are those big silver cups for?" he asked, picking one up and gazing at it critically.

"Those are the cups to be awarded as prizes at the sports meeting," returned the jeweller.

"For racing?"

The jeweller nodded.

"Well," said the stranger, edging nearer the door and still holding the cup, "suppose you race me for this one?"

IN FAVOUR

Wife: I think, darling, I'd like to be cremated.
Husband: Very well, my love. Get your hat.

WEDDING HINT.

The best man, says a gossip writer, is not absolutely essential to a wedding nowadays. The bridegroom, however, is still used, though he can be discarded shortly after the ceremony.

This is Frightfully Funny

"When my wife bets she always expects to win," says a correspondent. He should explain to his wife that faith won't move mountains.

Putting It Gently

A youthful billiards marker was informed by his employer that he would have to be more careful in the matter of chalk.

"Can't help it, sir," replied the marker. "I know the fellows who pocket the chalk; but they're regular customers, and you wouldn't like me to offend them, would you, sir?"

"No," was the reply; "but you could give them a gentle hint."

The marker promised to do so, and a few days later, noticing a player pocket a piece of chalk, he approached the culprit and remarked: "You'll excuse me, sir, but are you connected in any way with the milk trade?"

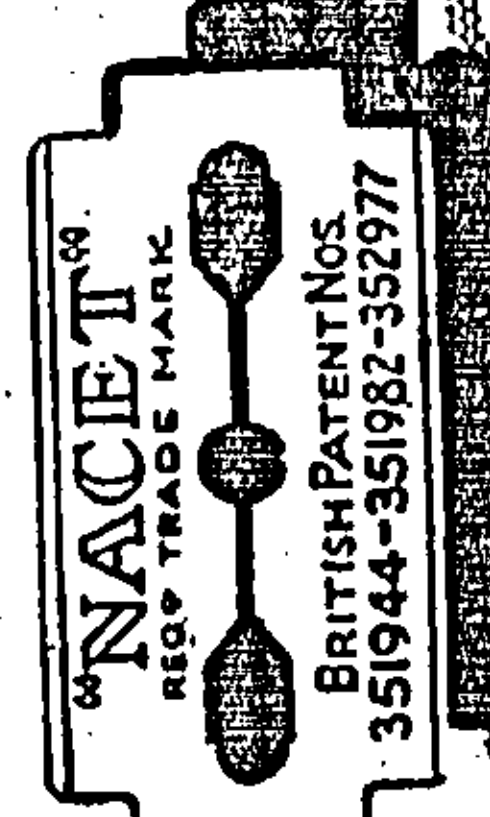

"Well, yes," was the reply.

"What of it?"

"I thought so," rejoined the marker. "By the amount of chalk you carry away. My boss likes enterprise, and he told me to give you a hint that if you wanted a bucket of water now and again you could have one with pleasure!"

GAME PRESERVATION IN TRAVANCORE

Indiscriminate Slaughter Danger.

SOME SPECIES EXTINCT

Trivandrum.

Travancore, falling into line with administrations in other States as well as British India, has taken suitable measures to prevent the wanton destruction of game in her forests and preserve her rare fauna from total extinction.

It was brought to the notice of the Government that wild animals and birds were becoming scarce in the State forests owing to indiscriminate shooting, that several valuable species had been completely exterminated and that places like the Bison Valley, Kaduvapara (tiger resort) and Karadikuzhi (Bear rendezvous) were not much more than names reminiscent of the wild animals that once abounded there.

The extension of cardamom cultivation, the assignment of lands within the Reserves and the grant of gun licences to various persons contributed to the destruction of the species that still remained.

The Government of Travancore, now alive to the danger of indiscriminate slaughter of wild animals and to the necessity of protecting them, has appointed Mr. S. C. H. Robinson as the game warden for the State.—Reuter.

Some of the men have been prospecting for a lifetime without result—only 10 per cent. of them can be said even to make a passable living. But their thoughts run only on the lucky 2 per cent to whom fortune has come.

"How long have you been digging?" one was asked.

"Twenty-two years," was the reply.

"Anything?"—asked commiseratingly.

"I'm just going to strike," promptly came the astonishing reply. It reflected the confidence of the confirmed prospector that his luck would turn at last.

Chance seems truly, in this commercial age, to claim a queer predominance in most of the big discoveries. The Cullinan Diamond, of 3,025 carats, was noticed casually by an overseer and dug out with a pocket-knife. Natives have come upon big gems by accident—one, large as an egg, was so found in the Barkly West district in 1928.

Three years ago two prospectors, having spent their last shilling on food, went straight from their meal to dig out a diamond of 200 carats, and thereby found a fortune.

Luck Will Turn—Some Day.
Jacobs Jonker, the fortunate digger of to-day, was working a claim which, according to Gen. Smuts, had only been wrung with difficulty from the authorities. His native boy "struck lucky". He is rich. He has given his name to a famous diamond.

"Some day," says every digger in his heart, "such luck will be mine." He will set to work again with grim resolve, especially if his concession is anywhere in the neighbourhood of the Premier Mine. His dream is still of the day when he may unearth the missing half of the marvellous Cullinan itself.

Speech Day At St. Stephen's College

Gratification Of Progress Expressed

FUNDS FOR NEW HOSTEL

Gratification at the progress made by St. Stephen's College during the past year, was expressed by Sir Henry Pollock, at the annual prize-giving at Stanley yesterday afternoon.

Sir Henry made particular mention of the efforts of the 1933 students and others in having raised $12,000 for the benefit of the new hostel fund.

The function, which was held in the Assembly Hall, was well-attended. The events of the year were reviewed by the headmaster, Mr. F. A. Britton, in his report, following which Sir Henry Pollock presented the awards, and was, in turn, presented with a memento of the occasion.

A short concert programme followed the speeches. Those present on the platform included the Hon. Dr. S. W. T'so, O.B.E., LL.D., Messrs. Mok Kon-sang, J.P., Cheung Wing-lue, F. G. Maude, and Andrew Ling.

The headmaster's report was as follows:—

The year 1933 was the Thirty First Year of the College and was a very successful one in many ways. Numbers rose from 102 in January to 182 in November, of these 147 being boarders.

Examinations Out of twenty-seven who entered for the Hong Kong University Matriculation, seventeen passed and two were awarded Senior Certificates, and 13 of them are now in Hong Kong University. This is the best record in the College for several years, and is the best percentage of passes amongst the larger schools of the Colony.

Health

Health has been very good, and the general physical fitness of Students is favourably commented on by visitors to the College. Dr. P. S. Stewart went on short leave, and during his absence Dr. H. P. Kho, an Old Boy, was in residence.

Sports

The Group system is showing excellent results. Tennis and Football are still popular, and basketball has gained support. Thanks to the generosity of Mr. Tang Shiu Kin, M.B.E., Old Boy & Member of the College Council, we now have a fine reinforced concrete diving pier. We have to thank Mr. G. B. G. Hull for great help in preparing the plans. At the Inter-school Sports we took second place, Tan Yong Nee winning the individual championship. Lee Hun Ngak won the Tennis championship at the University and Chhoa Keng Ju the Sports championship.

Building Fund

The Students of 1933 held a Concert in the Hall of our Sister College at which our orchestra provided several items, and a sum of more than seven thousand dollars was raised.

The Old Boys organized a series of theatrical performances as a result of which the sum of more than five thousand dollars was contributed to the Building Fund.

Staff

In September Miss A. D. Hancock, B.A., and Mr. R. G. Phillips, B.A., joined the Staff. In November the Warden and Mrs. Martin went on home leave; they hope to return for the opening of the School Year in September.

Christian Union

Discussion groups were held on Sunday evenings when Foodick's "Manhood of the Master" was used as a basis.

Weekly collections have been made, and contributions given for the help of Chinese lepers, village church, poor students, etc.

Mr. Ling has continued weekly services for the villagers.

One of the happiest occasions was when four of our senior students were confirmed by the Bishop at Stanley.

Other Activities

The Staff and the Forms took turns in giving concerts on Saturday evenings, and Debates on other Saturday evenings were well attended.

The Art Club held an exhibition of paintings and photographs, and under the direction of Mr. Ascho the Radio Society has made a good beginning and has already made its own recording apparatus.

A letter from the Rt. Rev. The Bishop of Hong Kong was also read, saying that His Lordship could not attend the exercises owing to a meeting with Dr. Kagawa, who is at present in Hong Kong. In presenting the prizes Sir Henry Pollock said:—

Let me express, in the first place, my pleasure at being here to present the prizes this afternoon.

The Warden's Report for the past year shows that this College continues to make satisfactory progress, and it may be well to be proud of its outstanding success in examinations to which the Warden has already alluded.

Government and Drainage

Its record in health and physical fitness is also a matter for congratulation, and I would express the hope that, during this year, the Government will continue to give us valuable assistance in the matter of draining spots where malarial mosquitoes are likely to breed.

I am glad to see that the College is doing well in Sports, and that, thanks to the generosity of Mr. Tang Shiu Kin, it has now a good diving pier.

As Chairman of the Finance Committee, I take this opportunity of thanking the students of 1933 for having raised $7,000, by a concert, and the Old Boys Committee and the Managers of the Ko Shing and Tai Ping Theatres and also the actors and actresses concerned for having raised $5,000 by theatrical performances for the benefit of our New Hostel Building Fund.

I am very pleased to note that religious and charitable activities have played their due part in the life of the College during the past year, because the paramount importance of doing service for others cannot be too strongly insisted on.

MY HEAVEN.

I sit among my roses,
And gaze on the sea,
While every blown daisy
Is loveliness for me.
My chair is warm and kindly,
My 'elay' is going strong,
I sit among my roses
And sum my soul with song.

A brave East wind and cheerful
Sings through the Lycopodium,
The gay white caps and mirthful
Break on the beach, Kowloon.
To me the harbour noises
Of Siren, which, and crane,
Come distant, mellowed, dreamful,
To bid me dream again.

Here over the sea come sailing
The ships of long ago,
The little ships, the cheap ships,
The tired ships and slow,
But the men that manned the little ships

The lost, the dead, the 'fired',
The shell-backs, the black-squad,
The men were never tired.

They held no 'extra' tickets,
No uniforms had they,
Just sailormen and shipmen
On wooden dollar pay.
God grant, if I was winging
The China Seas once more,
Such Coastguards as I'm singing,
Such shipmates as of yore.

All gone. I too am going —
Yet to have sailed with men
Is something. This I'm knowing Sure thing, we'll sign again.

For the ebb-tide, the first of it,
And away and far we'll steer,
For the long trip, the last trip,
On the course that's always dear.

Beneath the Golden Water-Gates,
For which the shipman clears,
We'll hit The Straits-Skipper and Mate,
The Doc, the Engineers:
Sing out for Captain Peter,
And hear the old lad moan
"Come in you China Coasters, You're a Munition of your men!"

For me, I'd break it gently —
"I have no use for wings,
I cannot play the Jew's harp,
I never solemn sings,
To Him Who All disposers
Through all eternities,
Sit me among the roses,
To gaze out on the sea!"

The Mortal Life Of Christ

Sacrifice That Saved The World

Death Rather Than Dishonour

(By A Local Padre.)

(This is another of the series of articles written exclusively for the "Sunday Herald" by a local Army chaplain.)

THE Season of Lent is drawing us towards Easter. Those of us who have made our good resolutions, and managed to keep them, so far, are feeling the strain a little less than when we began, and probably feeling all the better because of it. Some have cracked, but there is no need to be discouraged. It is better to have made a good resolution and broken it, than not to have made any at all. At the back of our minds there was at least the desire and the intention.

Some people are inclined to forget, sometimes, why the Season lasts forty days, or if they do remember, fail to understand that the period of temptation in the Wilderness was not only an example of how it can be overcome, but has some very definite lessons to teach us.

It happened after the Baptism of Christ in the Jordan. Straight from one of the most momentous experiences of His life, the opened heavens, the Voice of God, the acceptance by the Father of His Son. Straight from the light into the darkness of the powers of evil. He went alone, absorbed in thought, oblivious of all around Him, standing on guard against the forces that were testing His soul, meditating on His life work, considering and rejecting one plan after the other.

It was said of Him that "He was in all points tempted as we are and yet was without sin." Were these temptations a mere sham fight,—no real danger,—something very unlike our own?

They were not. It was as man and not God that He fought and won. He had our human longings, the same tendencies the same desires. He felt the keen pangs of hunger as we do. On the Cross He begged for a drink of water to quench His thirst. His spirit was crushed in mental agony in the Garden of Gethsemane.

He was conscious now, perhaps for the first time of what it was going to mean to tread the pathway of suffering, to have not where to lay His Head. For forty days that mental conflict went on. He was unconscious that he had taken no food. When He did realize it, it showed that the strain was wearing off. It must have been the memory of that intense conflict with the powers of the unseen world that led Him later to put into His prayer, "Lead us not into temptation."

The First Temptation

Then followed that part which we can more easily understand. He was no trained ascetic. His human body craved for food. In the dim light the scattered stones would seem like loaves of bread. There came the first temptation.

300 PRESENT AT HUNT BALL.

Peninsula Bedecked With Horse Shoes.

The Fanling Hunt and Race Club Ball was held at the Peninsula Hotel last night, approximately 300 guests being present. Dinner parties were given before the ball by Lady Furnable, Mr. Hancock, Mrs. Parkes, Col. F. P. Norworthy, Col. G. T. Raikes, Col. Carrington-Sykes, Major J. A. A. Griffin, Hon. Mr. J. J. Patterson, Messrs. D. A. O'Connor, N. Croucher, E. J. Gedge, G. B. Portman, and E. Ampe.

The hall was tastefully decorated with horseshoes and hunting whips.

20,000 FORD HANDS GET 10 PER CENT. RISE

A 10 per cent. rise in wages has been given to workers in the Ford plants here. The persons who will benefit by this increase number about 20,000.

"If Thou be the Son of God,"—If Thou be—Just test it and see. See if You can save yourself from starvation and death by turning these stones into bread. Why not? He was conscious of illimitable power. Why not use it now? He used it later to feed the multitude and turn the water into wine.

The devil was no fool. He knew it would be useless to suggest anything plainly wrong.

Is it not one of our biggest temptations when we ask ourselves about some desirable action, "Am I quite sure that this is wrong?"

Faint and depressed though He was, in the keen pain of hunger He saw He must not do this thing. Wasn't it to resist that He had gone into the Wilderness, and He must not ease up now. He decided then to make it the rule of His life never to use the power that was His to make life easier for Himself. He held it for the service of others. Having for our sakes become one of us, He cannot break the conditions by doing miracles on His own behalf. If He did it then, why not again and again? Save Himself in the after years from poverty, want and homelessness? Why not escape from the agony in Gethsemane? Why endure the agony of the Cross at the end?

Man Saved By Sacrifice

No. "He saved others, Himself He could not save." If life meant dishonour, He preferred to die. There are times in the life of all of us, when it would pay to take the line of least resistance, make life more pleasant by sacrificing something that we know to be right, by keeping silent when we know that we ought to speak, because policy, the goodwill of others, our jobs, suggest that silence is golden.

"A man must live" we say. Look at the names on the Menin Gate, or any of the other War Graves scattered across the world, and think again. A man can die, and men have died rather than betray the right. And by their sacrifice they have made the world.

Getting bread, important though it is, is not our first object in life.

Then came the second temptation. By faith in His Father He had won the first round. Now He is met on His own ground. Since you have this faith in God, prove it. Cast yourself from the top of the Temple before the assembled Priests and worshippers. This will be your crowning sign of your claim to be the Messiah. Anyway you will be quite safe, for does not the Scripture say His angels will guard your feet?

World Won By Love

He was thinking out His life plan. How could He best bring to this troubled world the blessings of the Kingdom of God? Should He unfurl the banners of that Kingdom with the hosts of Heaven at His command? The people looked for miracles from their Messiah. They would not accept him otherwise. Why not given them some sensational sign? They would jump to it.

That was the temptation;—that without suffering and without delay He might reach His goal,—not again for His own sake, but for the sake of the world. But He knew that faith and wonder were two very different things. He had come to gain men not by magic but by love. If the pain and sacrifice in the Heart of God would not win them, then nothing would.

On the one hand, a weary road, disappointment, delays, suffering, the Cross:—On the other the triumphal entry into His Kingdom, the acclamations of the multitude, no years of suffering, no Cross of shame.

And He chose then, as He ever the pathway that cost Him most. Calmly and dispassionately He went out into the grim desert to find His own.

LONDON TOPICS

From
OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.
London, Feb. 14.

How Many Fascists Make Five?

Fascist rule in Germany appears to be based rather on breaking heads than on counting them.

Supporters of the movement in England seem loath to adopt either policy.

The counting of heads at Sir Oswald Mosley's meeting in Birmingham recently has disclosed strange results.

The "Morning Post" found Sir Oswald addressing "more than 300 of his followers," but to the eye of the Daily Mail the hall appeared to be "crowded with 8,000 people."

It is, of course, not easy for the untrained observer to estimate numbers in cases where no check is taken at the doors.

The actual attendance was in fact disappointing. Some 3,000 Fascists from London and Birmingham turned out dutifully; the rest of the audience was made up of another 3,000 local men and women, mostly of the Conservatives type.

A Disappointment.

"The deep roars of applause and bursts of scornful laughter" to which the "Daily Mail" refers were no doubt contributed in equal proportions by both groups.

The "Daily Mail" was the only paper which found the atmosphere of the meeting enthusiastic.

It was, in fact, a disappointment to the Blackshirts, who expected more definite results from the ballyhoo which preceded it.

Cock-fighting in London.

If the sum of £20,000 which, it is stated is sometimes staked on a single cock-fight in the United States cannot be equalled in Britain, there are secret cock-fights in London in plenty.

Most mainly take place in the North of England; but they are held regularly in the West End of London. The audience is often a fashionable one with more than a sprinkling of celebrities.

Invitations are sent usually by telegram at the last moment. In them the event is referred to as a "poultry show."

Although cock-fighting has been illegal for years, it has had many champions.

Admiral Rous, "the Father of the Turf," used to protest vigorously against the ban. He pointed out that, although cruel, cock-fighting is no more cruel than certain permissible sports and less cruel than some.

The Academy Elections

There is rather more than the usual mild indignation in certain sections of the art world over the Royal Academy elections.

It is not directed against the fortunate four, but against the omissions. One or two "dead certainties" are still outside the fold; but they are young men.

The election of Mr. Charles Wheeler, the sculptor, is a tribute to the advanced school.

A keen-faced man of 40 with untidy hair, Mr. Wheeler left school without permission at 15, and has been busy with sculpture ever since. He has been exhibiting at the Royal Academy since 1914.

Looks the Part

Mr. S. J. Lamorna Birch, the new Royal Academician, certainly looks the part. He has a full, grey beard and nearly always wears a very old green plus-four suit.

He comes from the North, is fond of telling Lancashire stories, and started as a paper boy.

Before the war Mr. A. J. Muntings, Mr. Ernest Knight, Dame Laura Knight, and Mr. Algernon Newton all lived in Lamorna, the tiny village from which Mr. Birch takes his extra name.

Mr. Jory, the innkeeper, has a collection of early works given him by his artist customers. Any London dealer would give many thousands of pounds for it.

By-Election Problem.

The Scottish Universities is the only constituency that returns three members in Great Britain. Two of the members, including Mr. John Buchan, are Conservatives.

Mr. Cowan, who received a peerage in the New Year Honours was a Liberal. He was not attached either to the Samuelite faction.

He was the nominee of the Educational Institute. This body is as powerful among the electors in this constituency as is the miners' union in Wentworth.

The Institute will seek to nominate the new member. The Simonites will claim the seat.

If they put up a candidate, the Samuelites will probably oppose him. Their nominee may be Mrs. Mair, secretary of the London

MAN POSES AS JACK BUCHANAN

Hoaxes Pretoria Women.

GAOLED FOR FRAUD

Pretoria.

Six weeks' imprisonment with two days spare diet and solitary confinement was the fate of a tall, handsome young man, described as an artist, who successfully represented himself to a Pretoria woman as Jack Buchanan, the famous film star. He was Fred Walter Hilton (24) and was charged before a Pretoria Magistrate with fraud.

Approaching the complainant, Elizabeth Johanna Orr, Hilton, according to the evidence, asked for board and lodging.

"My name at present is Fred Talmadge," he told her, "but I am really Jack Buchanan, the film star. I am living incognito and without money for a bet, but I am really worth £80,000, and if you keep me in the meantime you will not lose by it."

He told her, said the complainant, who confessed to ambitions to go to Hollywood, that he had appeared in the film "Good Night Vienna," for which he had written the songs. He promised to take her and her children to America and they reserved first class passages to New York, which were to cost more than £300. He also promised to marry her.

She advanced Hilton money which, with the value of his board, amounted to over £30, of which she had recovered nothing.

Detective-Sergeant van Wyk said that Hilton was born in South Africa and his mother and step-father were in Pretoria. His name was neither Talmadge nor Buchanan.

Hilton, who pleaded for mercy, admitted several previous convictions for fraud and theft.

The Magistrate, in passing sentence, said that Hilton had made others suffer and was now going to be made to suffer himself.—Reuter.

The Conservatives will have to stand and deliver their votes for the Simonite. Three Conservatives in one seat would not be "National."

Black Shirts in Mayfair

The British United-Fascists have opened a branch in Mayfair, London. It is in Curzon-street just under the flat of a stage "star."

Visitors to the celebrity can read the Black Shirt notices on their way upstairs.

One is an order forbidding the wearing of uniform in the Piccadilly will be able to distinguish between a Black Shirt and a Black Sheep.

INFANT PRODIGY IN CANADA

Could Read Newspapers At 2½ Years.

ENTIRELY SELF-TAUGHT

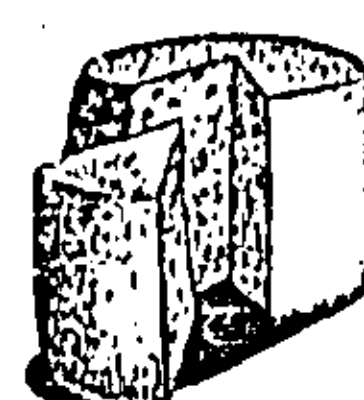

Montreal, Que.

Billy, three-year-old son of Hector McNeill, a civil engineer in the employ of the Canadian National Railways, is able to read and do simple sums in arithmetic. In all these things he is wholly self-taught.

Before his first birthday he began to pick letters out of newspapers. At 18 months he knew the alphabet. At 20 months he was able to dial any telephone number without help and was able to read words of 10 letters.

At two and a half years, Billy, or William Donald, to give him his full name, could read nursery books with ease and recently he astonished his parents still further by demonstrating that not only could he read newspapers but he understood what he was reading.

The child has received no instruction from his parents, nor has he received any schooling. In all other respects he is a normal child. Now he is interesting himself in script type of shorthand and already can read long passages without difficulty.—Reuter.

Europe had been disposed of the talk naturally settled on the small was that was on here and now. Three of the five were going on Guard on the Treasury for twenty-four hours that evening, and were wondering how much sleep they would manage to wangle; while the other two were on Headquarters Guard the following night. He sensed the fact that they were short of men to take over all the military duties. They were all living in barracks in the Law Courts, drilling morning and evening, and seemed to be in for a strenuous time.

He felt out of it. It all seemed so much balderdash to him, but nevertheless he felt out of it. He had always prided himself on being one of the lads, running with the gang, and here he was feeling like a damned outsider. They drilled on, and the talk was all of who was who's sergeant, and what kind of a sergeant he was, and their company officers, and the lack of messing arrangements—just like a lot of damned 'Swatties'. Good Heavens! Couldn't they get something else to talk about? It wasn't good enough. He hurried through his tiffin, and went straight from the table back to the office.

He buried himself in his work, getting the hang of everything against the morrow when all the responsibility would be his, and God knows he had plenty to do. A week would not have been a minute too long to get all the strings fairly into his hands, and he was given one day. He knew Brantlees well enough to know that it was no use asking him to delay his departure; it was a rush but it just had to be done. It was six of the clock before he could say he was fairly up-to-date, and every minute of the long afternoon his subconscious mind had been at work. Ridding him, nagging at him. The result was that ten minutes later he was climbing the steps to Headquarters. He had no intention of joining up—not him; with all that extra work on his shoulders that was unthinkable; but Headquarters was on the way to the Tram Station; he would just drop in and see what was doing.

Everybody he knew seemed to be there, and his appearance in the doorway of the drill hall was greeted by a yell of welcome. Every man-jack was in kah-kee, or half in kah-kee, or getting into kah-kee, or looking down the sights of a rifle, or struggling with the mysterious tangle of straps that holds everything in place for the infantry private. Judged from the noise and the jokes and the sky-larking it seemed rather a rally of Boy Scouts than an assemblage of sober business men bent of taking up the bloody work of war.

And here was the Volunteer Colonel smiling all over—he had always liked the old colonel—and big Romaine, the Volunteer Sapper Captain, an old friend and one of the best, grabbing him by the arms and leading him over to a far corner where that mighty man of fight, the Sergeant-Major Instructor, was dealing out arms and uniforms from a stacked and headed-up store. "Here's another recruit for you, Major," cried the Colonel. "Make a soldier of him!"

For an instant the spirit of revolt had welled up in him, but in the next moment it was quenched. The place and the hour vanquished him. He held back, but the grip of the Colonel on his arm tightened—and he knew that the Colonel knew. A wise, old guy and decent, the Colonel. He thought to tell them that he had no intention of joining, but his mouth had gone dry; he just couldn't do it. Then it came to him that every man present thought he was only doing his very obvious duty. Now mass psychology clutched him in its fell embrace. Who was he to see things otherwise. If Boardman of the Bank could find time to soldier, surely he with his much smaller responsibilities could find time to fall in line. So before he had quite realised what was happening he was possessed of a rifle which he was to discover was miles too short in the stock and so gave him grip every time he loosed it off, a plith topee two sizes too small that settled round his ears in a friendly manner the first time it was out in the rain, a bayonet, and a collection of straps holding a hundred and fifty cartridges, and the regimental tailor had run a tape over him for a uniform. He was then informed that he was now a private in 'B' company of the Volunteer Reserve, and as that seemed the end of the ordeal so far, he accepted Captain Romaine's suggestion that a drink on the head of it was due and in order with alacrity and thankfulness. With two large whiskeys inside him he found himself again on Garden Road well prepared to look all the world in the face as a soldier of the King.

Here he was to discover that for some the War was already a serious affair, and he cheered to find that the classic humour that stays the British Army in all great crises was not entirely confined to the departed Old Contemptibles.

When the Great Scrap eventuated the Volunteer Corps was mainly Artillery, and their arm the fifteen-pounder field gun. The Staff in its wisdom had ordered the guns to the South side of the Peak. Now the guns, each in tow of a long string of Chinese coolies, were being started off up the Peak Road, and their departure was being supervised and accelerated by a small Scots-Irishman Sergeant-Major, in a furor of perspiration and language. Mauley stayed to watch the Spectacle.

"Where's you and the guns off to now, Mack?" he enquired, sympathetically.

"Off to shoot bromley-kites on Jardine's Lookout," came the retort, that left Mauley a kind of sorry he had asked the question.

He was backing out, when he heard the high voice of authority, and found a Major of the Staff beside him. "You're not making much speed with the guns, Sergeant-Major. Can't you get more of a move on?"

"Give me some he-men coolies, Sir, and I'll get 'em up all right. Right look at 'em, sir! Call them coolies! Just a when we want 'em."

Mauley faded away, he felt that was no place for a mere private. He had noticed that the coolies were a poor lot and even as the Sergeant said the Contractor was paid per day per coolie, and had taken full advantage of his agreement. Mauley had learned that war profiteering was already underweigh, even on the second day of hostilities.

He dined at the Club, and that night with some three hundred others he slept on a camp bed on the verandah of the Law Courts, commanded by the Government as a barracks for the "Reserves". He turned in early, to be prepared to meet the coming day and he knew not what horrors, for from the talk he had learned that the drill was not a thing to be taken lightly.

A midnight he started up wide awake, and wondering where on earth he was—if he was on earth. All around and against him the moon made a glory of great columns of shining granite, and far over him loomed shadowed arches that lay on the moonlight in a noble perspective of curves and domes. And all about him was a road of breakers on an ocean beach. The Reserves were taking their repose, and the sound of it reverberated within and about Webb's masterpieces till the very stones sang again. Undoubtedly, if snoring had counted as a military accomplishment, the "Reserves" would have been invincible.

He was routed out by the bugle at the ungodly hour of five-thirty, donned his panoply of war, bolted a cup of coffee and a biscuit for which he was graciously allowed to pay ten cents, and fell in with the awkward squad on the cricket ground at six, under a mounting sun that already had a sting in it. There for two hours he suffered the painful process, known as recruit drill, under the instruction of an ex-servicant of marines, who timed all their ungodly contortions at the speed of the drill deck, which is about half as fast again as that required of the beetle-crushers or grass-mangling infantry of the line.

For the War Office had not left the Colony even one infantry regular instructor, and the instruction was of necessity, delegated to ex-soldiers, most of them many years left the service and settled here in civil employ. Old Soldiers, with their ribbons for the Boer and Indian Wars, Roberts' and General, and Wolseley's little Red Book their bible. There was a good stiffening of such in the ranks of the Reserve. Wise old lads who kept a shut mouth and a stiff lip at all times, and the green hands learned of them and were thankful.

At eight o'clock Mauley was dismissed feeling like a wet rag, had a badly-needed shower, and his breakfast at the Club, did a good two days' work at the office, and fell in again at five-thirty on the parade ground. At seven-thirty he was allowed to fall out more or less a total wreck, with the intimation that if he was not in barracks by ten of the clock he was "for it".

Beyond the morning coffee no messing was provided for the Reserves. No food and travelled at your own expense, but it was rumoured that if you made a loud unbecomely wail your grateful country would refund your tram fares. As an economically-run unit of the British Army the Hong Kong Volunteer Reserve marched like unto Abou Ben Adhem's of poetic fame, in the Angel's Book "led all the rest." Their cost to the taxpayer over the four years was exactly the price of one kah-kee uniform plus the ammunition they expended on target practice.

His second day as a soldier was a duplicate of the first, as was his third with the added diversion that instead of getting his much needed repose in the Law Courts he spent the night on Treasures or Bank Guard, doing two spells of two hours on sentry duty stamping up and down the concrete pavement, and the intervals off duty trying with small success to get a little blasphemously-supplanted soldier's knock of falling into a sound sleep. But the Bank did them well, gave them cocktails to indiscretion in first-class dinner, and at any time if the bell was touched during the interminable night there was John in his long coat and with a longer whiskey-nye.

On Saturday afternoon, when he had thought to do some much-needed work in the office, he was taken for a route march through China town, and saw very thoroughly the frosty stare of Taipingsung that he had hardly known of except by ill-reputation. On Sunday he left by early train for Fanling, not to golf but to enjoy a field-day over the rough country in the Shau-ta-kok direction. The line of advance was supposed to be strictly a Staff Secret, but the coolies carrying the tiffin evidently had advance information and struck a bee-line over the hills half-a-mile in front of the skirmishers. So the word in the ranks was—"Keep your eye on the beer, soldiers! That's the idea."

At the end of two weeks of this intensive training he was considered good enough to drill with his company. He found his section all of the most distinguished. Boardman of the Bank, Balice of the Anglo-Indian Line, in fact the whole sixteen were heads of firms and Taipans by divine right and the virtue of cast-iron inwards. If any one of his section was making less than ten thousand golden shillings per annum it could only be himself and the sergeant—the same ex-marine, before-mentioned, who in civil employ knocked down a hundred-and-fifty local bucks per month perambulating the harbour in a wheezy steam launch selling a well-known brand of gargle to dusty-throated skippers, mates, and engineers. It intrigued Mauley to watch the mighty at their unaccustomed work and, particularly when they checked their cartridges and the hundred-and-fifty were shot out on the grass to find that Boardman, that mighty man of figures, was always just to get his tally correct, and fumbled away with clips and cartridges, while the sergeant of the hundred-and-fifty bucks stood over him making nasty remarks about the way some people's education had been neglected. But they were good sorts and genial withal, taking their soldier's troubles with a joke, all joined up with the idea rather of showing a good example to the younger men than with any inflated ideas as to their own values as units of the Defence Force.

MOTORING NOTES

USE AND ABUSE OF THE HORN.

Discretion Required.

Motorists should learn discretion in the use of the horn. This is particularly necessary in the case of nervous, hesitating and unwatchful pedestrians.

It is often dangerous to sound the horn, and good judgment is needed to discriminate as to when the first consideration should be to control the car without sounding the horn at all.

Too many people regard the horn as a passport. It should not be used if there is a probability of scaring anybody into making a wrong and, possibly fatal movement.

STOPPING NEAR CORNERS.

Dangerous Habit Of Some Motorists.

Some motorists have a dangerous habit of stopping their cars close to corners to pick up or set down passengers.

A car standing close to a corner is a menace to safety, as it prevents other drivers from obtaining an adequate view of the cross street, and also blocks the vision of oncoming drivers of traffic emerging from the cross street.

Another element of risk is that a car parked on a corner causes traffic on the same side of the road to make a wide turn, instead of keeping close to the left-hand kerb.

A MILLION MILES' MOTORING.

"I have driven a car a million miles in 26 years without ever having an accident," was the claim of a Blackpool motorist who was lately fined £1 and costs at Fleetwood Sessions for driving a motor-car without due care.—(The Auto-far).

NEW ENGINES AND FREE-WHEELING

Don't Free-Wheel When "Running-In."

MISLEADING MILEAGE CALCULATIONS

Purchasers of new cars which are provided with a free-wheeling device in the transmission should be careful not to make use of that fitting habitually during the period in which the engine is being run in.

If that precaution is neglected the frictional parts of the engine will not have obtained good working finish at the time when the speedometer reading indicates that the running-in period has elapsed.

When the free-wheel is in use the engine merely idles whenever the driver's foot is taken off the accelerator and the car allowed to coast.

It follows, therefore, that during a given mileage the engine will not have made nearly so many revolutions as would be the case if positive drive had been maintained at all times, and consequently the thoroughness of its running-in will be proportionately deficient.

ROAD TRANSPORT WORTH £300,000,000

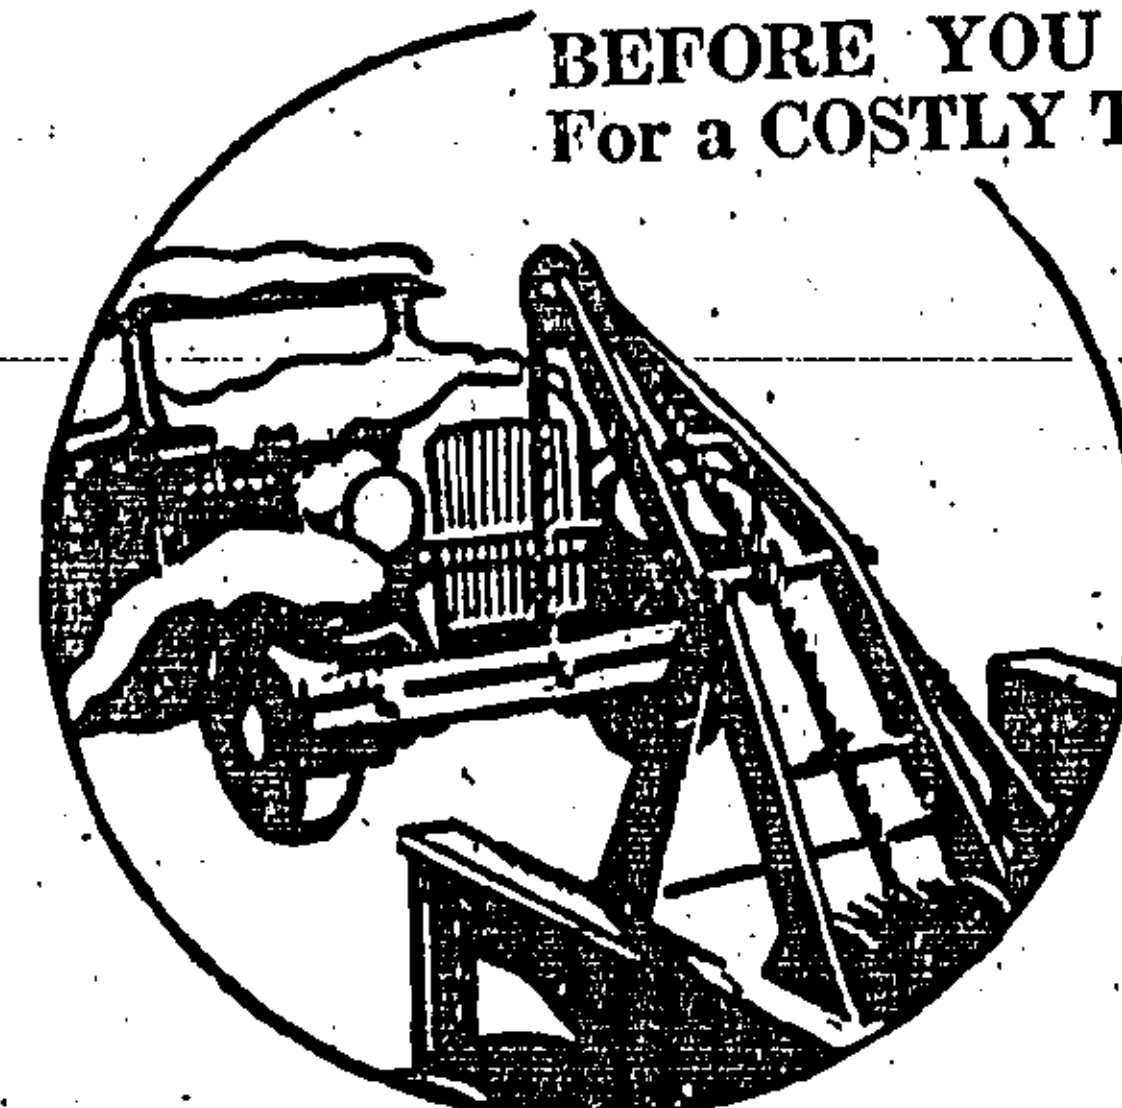

How good transport by road has given so much in 12 years that it now involves £300,000,000 of capital was told at a London meeting of haulage contractors, reported in "Motor Transport."

It was stated also that the industry now employed, directly or indirectly, more people than the four railway companies put together.

NEW LONDON SPEEDWAY

Plans for a new speedway on the site of the New Cross Greyhound Stadium have been passed by the Auto-Cycle Union.—(The Motor Cycle).

Ohio has 13,000 service stations of which 8,600 are owned by individuals.

BRIDGE NOTES

Defence Against Slams.

EVENING play had not yet begun, and the Club Expert was idly trying his luck at "Miss Milligan" when the City Merchant plunged himself down at the table.
"There's no keeping track of all these internal conventions," he trumbled cheerfully. "Just not a new one I'd never even heard of.
But I like to keep up to date. Be a good chap, Expert, and tell me about it."

"I dropped in late this afternoon for a rubber, and drew against that girl Poker Face and young Aspirant, and she announced, if you please, that they were playing what sounded like the 'Lightning Slam convention.'"

"She would," laughed the Club Expert. "I only showed it to her and Aspirant yesterday. I suppose the young monkeys wanted to try it out. What happened?"

"Sheer Bad Luck."

"Well, I didn't admit my ignorance," said the City Merchant, sorting out the cards, "and it didn't really matter, because, they never had a chance to call a Slam. But I had, in the last game of the rubber, and went down one by sheer bad luck. I was North, and these were the hands:

NORTH:
S-A x
H-K Q x x x
D-K x
C-K J x x

WEST:
S-Q J 10 x
H-x x x
D-A Q J 10 x x
C-None

SOUTH:
S-K x x
H-A J 10 x
D-x
C-A Q 10 x x

EAST:
S-x x x x
H-x
D-x x x x
C-x x x x

"The bidding went:
Round 1 2 3 4
South ... 1C 3H 4H No
West ... 1D No ... No Dblo
North ... 2H 4C 6H
East ... No No No
It was Poker Face who doubled.
Sitting West, and Aspirant, instead of leading her Diamonds to her, had the lucky inspiration to lead a Club, which she ruffed. Then she made her Ace of Diamonds. With any other lead, of course, I make my Small Slam easily."

A Fresh Weapon

"It wasn't luck or inspiration,"
the Club Expert disabused him.
"That was the convention. It's called the Lightning—not Lightning —Slam Lead convention, because it was devised by Theodore Lightning as a means of defence against Slams. It's very useful, especially now that Slam calling has become so fine an art. The defence badly needed some fresh weapon. That's why the convention has suddenly taken on, for it now new — he brought it out about two years ago,
I think."

"What's the idea of it?" asked the City Merchant.
"Quite simple. If you have the lead against a Slam, and your partner has doubled, his double is a command not to lead his suit, if he has bid one. If he hasn't bid a suit, it's a request to you to make an unorthodox lead. In fact, he is telling you that he thinks he can break the contract, if you can succeed in finding the lead to suit his hand."

BELGIUM'S QUOTA ON "DICKEYS."

Clothing Articles To Be Controlled.

Brussels.
"Dickey" detachable shirt-fronts,
"dummy" cuffs, and ties are among the latest articles to be controlled under the Belgian import regulations.
Licences must be obtained before any woman's or men's clothing can be imported into Belgium. The British Chamber of Commerce here is to have charge of applying the quota for Great Britain. The quota scheme will be based on the imports from each country during 1932.—Reuter.

For Mauley the only fly in the military ointment was the fact that Coltman, a lately-joined youngster in the office of Reid, Herring and Company, was his Second Lieutenant. He chafed it up as another nasty knock from the Kaiser that in addition to the tribulations normal to soldiering he should have to take orders from one of his own juniors. It seemed the lad had field a commission in the London Scottish, and Mauley thought of asking him if he would not like to transfer his valuable services to the French Front, but on further thought he decided to say nothing.
That was a matter for each man to decide for himself. He would stick it just as he was sticking the whole damn business. It seemed to him that was all he was doing since this blasted scrap started—sticking it.

The long red-hot August weeks dragged by, the War carried on into months. The Japs came in on the right side, the German Pacific fleet met their Trafalgar at the Falklands.
But there was no ease up in the drill routine for the Reserves, and Wireless and Concentration Camp Guards had to be provided by the Corps, for the sufficient reason that there were no other guards available.

But through it all Mauley to his little wonder kept fit; not for years had he passed so lightly through the rigours of the Hong Kong summer.
He ate and drank as he felt inclined, and the old liver made never a sign of remonstrance. And the thirty pounds weight of rifle, ammunition, and equipment that had weighed like a ton in his recruit days, he carried and hardly knew it was there. It was true he had dropped twenty pounds of avoidpoids, and was down to his fighting weight, but he owned he was all the better for it.

Then came Christmas, when according to the optimists the War should have been over. Instead the voice of Kitchener, the man who knew, warning the Empire to prepare for three years' war, and calling up his First Hundred Thousand. We were into the Second year of the War.

As to his office work to Mauley's relief after he had settled in and got the hang of things it came easy.
With his temperament responsibility sat on him lightly. Then again during the early months of the War there was little business doing, and when the Government commandeered the greater part of the Company's fleet and spread them all over the Seven Seas he had less to worry him than ever. So he had the more time to attend to his private concerns.

Now for the first time in his life he found these same private concerns his chief interest. For the War Boom was on. Ice House Street was calling.
He sold his hat, and bought sugar shares, and came out in six months having doubled his money. From the inside he could not help but see the day coming when ships would be the life blood of the Allies, so he invested his all, and all that The Bank would advance, in shipping. And the ships went up and up, till he got quite dizzy counting his weekly, even his daily, makings. Then he got cold feet, and sold out well under the top,
and all his friends except Boardman, the man who never lost his head if he was weak on counting cartridges, called him a fool. Then he soaked his pile away in Banks and Unions, and knew he was sitting pretty for the rest of his natural.

With his private affairs in such good trim he had time for a general stock-taking; and he found himself certain of what for some time he had been suspicious—that he was beginning to be annoyed with the Kaiser. Nothing personal, mind you, just on general principles.

"The fact was he was now more than fed up with the double life he was condemned to. 'Business as Usual' was all right; but 'Business as Usual' plus never-ending drills, route marches, field days and guard duty seemed a bit thick. If the War Office had left the Corps alone things would have been bearable, but every other month as it seemed to him they issued a new drill book, and the whole drilling shooting match had to be learned over again. Worst still, the expenditure of sub-lieutenants on the French Front being stupendous, the War Office made of the Corps a training unit for such youngsters as were selected for commissions, and these lads had to learn their end of the drill at the expense and to the utter weariness of the trained men in the ranks, from dressing by numbers right through to musketry practice. It wasn't good enough, he was damned if it was, and he began to wonder if there was no way out of it."

For months he debated the thing within himself but got nowhere. He knew he wasn't much of a soldier, and if he had decided to go to the Front, the Firm would not have granted him 'leave' anyhow. It seemed to him that with Brantleys away and a reduced staff he owed it to them to stay where he was. He could have applied for some modified form of exemption from drills and guards, but that would have meant that another man would have had to take his duty, and men available for guards especially were few enough already. He couldn't let his pals of 'B' Company down. Neither could he see himself relegated to 'D' Company, the refuge of the done old men and the born tired.

All the same he was fed up to the neck, and with the third summer of the War ahead of him he felt he just couldn't go on. The position proved on him, even his good temper failed him at times, he grew irritable and worried by small things, and his face showed it. Men began to notice it and say "What the matter with old low."

A HOME WITHOUT 'ASPRO'

MEANS GREAT RISK FOR EVERY MEMBER

If "ASPRO" is not in your home, it should be, in YOUR interest.
It should be there to dispel attacks of pain, it should be there to break up colds and influenza when they first appear — it should be there as a guarantee of sweet sleep to the sleepless. "ASPRO" is not just a soother of pain in 5 to 10 minutes. Its mission is far greater and deeper, for it dispels the cause of the pain and so prevents the development of serious illness. Its service in reducing feverishness is of great moment. Keep "ASPRO" in the house and you keep out illness as well as soothing away pain. These are facts demonstrated by thousands. A trial will demonstrate it to you, too. "ASPRO" Tablets are easy to take — there are no harmful after-effects — they create no craving — no nausea — no digestive troubles — they just do their work of soothing away the pain and of dispelling or dissolving the cause, leaving Nature to go unhindered in her great progress of activity, healing and expression. "ASPRO" not only stops the pain, but it saves your money
— it enables you to work when otherwise you could not have worked — it is the medicine of the new age — safe, sure and effective. It stands up to all claims made for it. "ASPRO" stops illness and stops pain.

Before You Leave Home
Don't Forget Your
'ASPRO'

You leave home as "It as a fiddle" but never know the moment when fate will prove unkind in the form of a headache—neuralgia or nerve pains, or maybe it will be a rheumatic attack. The slightest derangement of your nervous system may make you feel "nervy" or irritable. The sight of an accident may upset you for the day. In crowds germ contamination may place you in the quick grip of a cold or influenza. The best protection for such emergency is to make certain that you put a few "ASPRO"
Tablets in your pocket or purse
BEFORE YOU LEAVE HOME.

Give 'Aspro' A Trial

Try 'Aspro' to day. It promises you not to fail. Millions of people have proved how safe, effective and useful it is.
It costs little—it saves much.
Always keep 'Aspro' in your home pocket or purse.

'ASPRO' is Woman's Best Friend

Possibly the greatest users of 'ASPRO' are women, for whom
'ASPRO' has a special charm on account of the varied periodical experiences with which all women are familiar. They surely know just what a wonderful soother and pain dispeller
'ASPRO' is. Millions of women throughout the world now regularly take 'ASPRO' the safe, sure and effective medicine to relieve their and accompanying physical depression, who before had to resort to dangerous drugs, narcotics or opiates. The understanding woman uses 'ASPRO'.

Mentone, Texas.

No crime, no bonded indebtedness and no cemetery.

Such is the happy state of affairs in the 763 square miles of loving County, Texas, youngest sub-division which was organised only two years ago.

Only one death occurred in the two years. A cowboy named Shady Davis who had fallen off a horse in New Mexico died here.

There is no resident Minister and only one lawyer.
Thirty-nine lawsuits have been filed but no Grand Jury indictments have been returned since the county began functioning. It has 250 registered voters.

Born in the depression,
Loving County was carved out of that vast area geographically known as Southwest Texas. It borders New Mexico, and the Pecos River meanders along its western limits.

Mentone, the county seat, was founded three years ago by one Jim Wheat, who bought a 7,000-acre tract and drilled for oil where geologists said none could exist. Wheat however got the oil.

Mentone has two hotels, a lum-

FASCIST ASSAULT CASE ADJOURNED

Castor Oil Not Used Punitively.

"BLACK SHIRTS" NOTHING TO DO WITH IT

London, Yesterday.

Emphatic denials that the British Fascists used castor oil punitively, were made by witnesses for the defence in the Fascist assault case which opened at Westminster Police Court, last Saturday.

The counsel for the defence declared that Symes and Sharman, two of the defendants, did not touch Richardson, the plaintiff, while Mills, the third defendant, hit him in self-defence.

Council spiritedly asserted that the three men were charged with assault. The question of whether they wore black shirts had no more to do with the case than whether Bishops wear uniform.

The case was adjourned. — Reuter.

Mr. Phillips said that President Roosevelt emphasised that the United States has an "interest" in the success of the world Disarmament plans and would accord every possible assistance to other nations striving for a workable formula.

The American delegate to the Disarmament Conference, Mr. Norman Davis is now in Europe on private business, and will not officially discuss Disarmament with any foreign Government.

Mr. Davis, however, expects to confer with Captain Eden, informally, and also with other European experts. — Reuter.

STAVISKY SCANDAL

BEAUTIFUL
WIDOW NOW
IN CUSTODY

Missing Counterfoils Recovered.

MYSTERIOUS VISITOR TO POLICE INSPECTOR

Paris, Yesterday.

Mme. Arlette Stavisky, the beautiful widow of Serge Alexander Stavisky, the man behind the Bayonne bond scandal, which caused the overthrow of two Governments, has been arrested following tremendous activity on the part of the police, who finally recovered the missing counterfoils of cheques given by her husband.

The counterfoils, which gave the names of many who had received bearer cheques from Stavisky, were delivered at the home of M. Bony, an inspector of the Surete-Generale, who was recently suspended on undisclosed charges of corruption in connection with the Stavisky case.

M. Bony, nevertheless, continued his investigation in an endeavour to reinstate himself.

Under a seal of secrecy of his identity, a mysterious man handed the counterfoils to M. Bony, after the inspector had appeared before the Disciplinary Council. — Reuter.
